Prime time at high court

The U.S. Supreme Court opens its new term Monday. Below are some of the important cases the nation's highest court will hear and then decide during its 2010-11 session, scheduled to last through June. REUTERS

Anti-gay protests at military funerals

» At issue: Whether constitutional free-speech rights protected anti-gay protests by members of a small Kansas church at funerals for U.S. military members killed in Iraq.

The protesters argued their message and picketing were constitutionally protected, even though they involved a private family funeral.

The church members have picketed at funerals of U.S. military members killed in Iraq or Afghanistan as part of their religious view that God is punishing America for its tolerance of gays and lesbians.

Background checks at NASA

» At issue: Whether NASA background investigations, required of scientists, engineers and all other employees at its Jet Propulsion Laboratory in California, violated their privacy rights.

All positions at the laboratory, owned by NASA and operated by the California Institute of Technology, are filled by contract employees.

Employees who do not agree to the checks could lose their jobs. The ruling could affect the background investigation process used by the federal government for more than 50 years.

Lawsuits against vaccine makers

» At issue: Whether a federal law protected vaccine manufacturers from lawsuits in state court seeking to hold them liable for damages.

The case involved a lawsuit by the parents of a child who suffered seizures after her third dose of the DTP vaccine. They sued the manufacturer for alleged defects in the vaccine.

The ruling could affect about 5,000 federal claims alleging a link between childhood vaccines and neurological damage like autism, and whether those claimants also can seek damages under state law.

DNA testing of death row inmate

» At issue: Whether a Texas death row inmate can use a civil rights law to require that the state test DNA evidence he says could prove his innocence in a triple murder.

Attorneys for death row inmate Henry Skinner argued that his rights under the civil rights law were violated by authorities' refusal to grant DNA testing after his conviction.

In the U.S., post-conviction DNA testing has exonerated more than 250 people, including 17 prisoners who served time on death row, according to the Innocence Project.

Violent video games

» At issue: Whether a California law banning the sale and rental of violent video games to minors violated constitutional free-speech rights.

It will be the first time the high court has heard and decided a case involving government regulation of video games.

The Supreme Court will consider whether violent material in video games should be subject to the same legal standard courts have used to prohibit the sale of sexually explicit material to minors.

The other immigration law

» At issue: Whether business, civil rights and immigration groups can succeed in their legal challenge to an Arizona law that punishes employers who knowingly hire illegal immigrants.

Supported by President Obama's administration, the groups argued the 2007 state law infringed on federal powers and should be struck down.

The law is different from the Arizona law passed this year that requires the police to determine the immigration status of any person suspected of being in the country illegally.

If you know of something in social media or on the Internet that has you and your friends talking, please share it. If I use it, I'll be sure to give you the credit you deserve right here.

TWEET OF THE WEEK

@funnyoneliners: I saw a bumper sticker that said "I Miss New York." So I smashed their window and stole their GPS.

TV's hottest trend: As seen on Twitter

There's a show. That's a show. ... How is that a show?

Russell Dalrymple of NBC didn't understand when George Costanza proposed it on "Seinfeld." The idea of a show about nothing just didn't make much sense.

Years later, shows about nothing apparently do make sense. What makes them even more fascinating is where they got their start: on social media. Specifically: Twitter.

Let's take the Twitter feed @[bleep]mydadsays. The idea of a 29-year-old guy writing down everything his live-in 74-year-old dad says sounds funny. CBS thinks so. It recently began airing "$#! My Dad Says" starring William Shatner as the dad. Fascinating, right? But considering I can't print what the tweets say because of the language, you have to wonder if the idea ultimately will survive network TV editing—and the harsh critics—for more than a few episodes.

Apparently CBS isn't afraid of trying the idea until it gets it right. Newsday reports the network is adapting the Twitter feed @shhdontellsteve, in which Steve's roommate secretly tweets what Steve is doing. That's a show? How is that a show? Let me give this a try. Here are a few social media feeds I think would make for good—or at least interesting—TV.

Britney Spears' Facebook feed

With almost 5 million fans, it comes with blockbuster ratings. And with dialogue like this, we'd always be on the edge of our seat. Britney: Happy Friday people! Am I a part of your future? —Brit Sarah Thwaites Flooglehorn: You look great glee ep rocked. I'm just about to rebuy your albums haha

@funnyoneliners Twitter feed

Notice anything similar about the TV show ideas you've read so far? None is funny. @funnyoneliners is funny and features zingers. » "My doctor told me to avoid unnecessary stress, so I didn't open his bill."

» "A baby first laughs at the age of four weeks. By that time his eyes focus well enough to see you clearly."

My dog's Twitter feed

Yes, my dog is on Twitter. And yes, @macthepuggle is funnier than Steve's roommate. It's the adventures of a frozen green bean-obsessed puggle in the city. There's comedy. And drama! » "I found a whole blueberry bagel at the park but wasn't allowed to have any of it. Mean." » "I wanted to stay at park to watch Ferris Bueller, but dogs aren't allowed. I'm green bean queen of Chicago. That tops sausage king, right?"

THOSE are shows. Is there a Twitter or Facebook feed that you read regularly that you think would make a good TV show? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me. Then, check your local listings. And follow my dog.

CORRECTION

A story about "The Social Network" in Friday's RedEye should have said that then-17-year-old actor Jesse Eisenberg and a friend had a falling out after writing a screenplay for which they were not paid.

coverstory

Jennifer Lacey

38, Bridgeport

Degree: Bachelor's (1996) and master's (2008) degrees in journalism from Columbia College of Chicago

Occupation: Video trainer for public access channel CAN-TV

"The Economy" effect: "When I went in for my degree, I did not expect that it would take so long or be so difficult to find a job in my field," said Lacey, who has taken both paid and unpaid internships, including one at Tribune Company and WBEZ. Her goal is to become a documentarian. Lacey kept her career going by taking freelance work, including a current stint producing video for Jet magazine's website. She also has signed up for online training to refresh her editing skills. But she acknowledged feeling hopeless when her journalism degree didn't seem to be netting any calls and attempts to gain entry-level positions in general business did not yield results.

DEGREES OF SEPARATION

Lacey, though not producing the documentaries

she loves, is glad she held out for a related-field position as a video trainer at a public access channel. There, Lacey will teach people how to produce their own shows. "I think I've gotten close to throwing in the towel, but I really do want a career as a videographer and right now I am able to stay close to that field," Lacey said. "I'm not at the Ramen-for-dinner-place just yet. I can still afford a little bit of meat."

RIGHT DEGREE, WRONG JOB

Graduates say lessons learned in college don't always translate into careers

Whitehead

By Kyra Kyles

REDEYE

Before he walks out of his South Shore home, John Whitehead said he often glances at his framed bachelor's degree setting on the mantle.

"It was a big thing in my family to graduate from college," Whitehead, 34, said of the speech and communications degree he earned from Chicago State nine years ago. "It gives me a lift every time I look at it."

But the degree does little more than temporarily brighten his spirits and take up space on the mantle, according to Whitehead, who said his goal was to become a journalist. After having trouble finding paid media internships upon graduation, he worked a series of retail jobs, including at Filene's Basement. He then turned his search to customer service-related positions and most recently, worked as a dispatcher for a Niles-based company. But Whitehead was laid off in December, along with others in his department.

"We were replaced by computers," Whitehead said, adding that not only has he discarded his journalism dreams, he is skeptical about finding a full-time, decently paying position in the communications field—period.

"There was a time when you had to have at least a high school diploma to get a decent job," Whitehead said. "And now a college degree is not getting you anywhere anymore. There are people with grad degrees working at McDonald's."

Whitehead is just one of a number of Chicagoans who believe college degrees have been rendered almost useless in the current economy. Several locals said they have completely changed, or at least significantly altered, their career directions due to the grim realities of the tight job market. Chicagoans in their early to mid-20s expressed even less optimism about the return-on-investment rate of their degrees.

Job statistics seem to support that readjustment in expectations. Approximately 50 percent of college-educated workers 25 and younger who began working this year took jobs that didn't require a bachelor's degree, including waiting tables and selling retail, according to the director of the Center for Labor Market Studies at Northeastern University in Boston, the L.A. Times reported. Andrew Sum—also an economics professor at the university—said that figure was only 25 percent just a few years ago.

For his part, Whitehead plans to launch his own business—an advertising and marketing agency that also produces a full-color African-American heritage calendar. The idea for the calendar—born out of a black history project he helped his daughter with last year—led Whitehead to purchase a domain name and save seed money for an October launch.

"I figured the market wasn't making anything happen for me, so I have to make it happen for myself," Whitehead said of his job search. "It's just gotten to a point where I'm tired of looking."

RedEye rounded up other Chi-towners who, like Whitehead, have gotten creative with their career strategies. We spoke with a psychology major-turned-producer, an aspiring documentarian-turned-teacher and a copy editor who had to leave the city to pursue her chosen field. Here's how fellow professionals are using, ignoring or totally reimagining their degrees. KKYLES@TRIBUNE.COM

Katherine Grandstrand

25, Formerly of Andersonville and Rogers Park, but recently relocated to Dickinson, N.D.

Degree: Bachelor's and master's degrees in journalism from Bemidji University (2007) and Columbia College (2009), respectively

Occupation: Full-time copy editor for the Dickinson Press newspaper and part-time employee at Bath and Body Works

Economic outlook: Grandstrand said that when she lived in Chicago, she found herself scrambling to find a job in her chosen field. "I did all the right things by sending out resumes and putting out applications before I graduated. It took me a while, but I finally got hired at a photography studio in Evanston and worked there through Christmas." To make ends meet with the part-time job touching up photos, among other tasks, Grandstrand pulled double duty working at Bath and Body Works, where she also worked while attending college. "I still was struggling," Grandstrand said, adding her family had to help her pay rent. "Nobody I knew was getting hired in their field. There were times I thought, 'How long until I end up a homeless person on the street?'"

DEGREES OF SEPARATION

The current North Dakota resident said she is happy to be in her chosen field and feels much more independent, even though her family still is helping her with credit card debt she accrued in Chicago. "I used to listen to Suze Orman always saying to save up an emergency fund and I was scared because I knew I didn't have enough money to do that. Now I'm feeling better about things."

Katie Barthelow

22, Ravenswood

Degree: Bachelor's degree in African and black diaspora studies from DePaul University (2010)

Occupation: Project Developer for AmeriCorps at Chicago Cares

"The Economy" effect: Many in her degree field end up in academia, said Barthelow, who at one point planned to become a professor. But once she graduated from DePaul University, she wanted to take a break and was surprised that few jobs, even entry-level corporate jobs, were available. "I applied and applied, but nobody was getting back to me," Barthelow said of her attempts to secure administrative-level positions, such as the ones she'd held on the DePaul campus. "I got a little scared because others of my friends had their Ph.D. programs lined up and others had jobs lined up."

Barthelow then joined AmeriCorps and was placed in a project development position that connects 8- to 18-year-olds with volunteer or required community service opportunities. "What I love about it is that we are helping young people turn around and help their own communities, going to beautify a community garden or helping kids younger than they are or working with seniors," Barthelow said. "They have the power to be a part of helping their community and it's really rewarding to see that happen." Still, Barthelow—whose work has influenced her to pursue a future master's degree in education—recognizes she cannot survive on her current meager stipend. "I always assumed a degree would make it so that you could earn a certain amount," Barthelow said. "This economy has opened my eyes."

Stan Blyudoy

24, Hawthorne Woods

Degree: Bachelor's degree in psychology from University of Illinois at Chicago (2010)

Occupation: Full-time music producer, singer and sound engineer and part-time Best Buy employee as a mobile phone consultant

"The Economy" effect: Blyudoy, known professionally as Mr. Music of the pop-and-rap duo LA and Mr. Music, said he did not allow the economy to stop him from pursuing his dreams of being an artist. In fact, he took a break from earning his psychology degree to produce an album with his business partner. But fear that he would not make enough as a musician did prompt him to keep working at Best Buy, a company he has worked for on and off during the past four years.

Blyudoy said he never was specifically interested in becoming a psychologist but pursued the degree because it was something he felt he would be good at. He always wanted to attend an arts school and focus on music. Still, he sometimes has second thoughts about how far his occupation is from his degree. "It haunts me sometimes and consumes me ... the idea that it's hard to find a job and I realized long ago, I couldn't really fall back on my psychology degree unless I went back to school and got a master's," Blyudoy said. "But when I talk to my friends who did get jobs in their field, none of them are extraordinarily happy. Even though they've been able to move out on their own and use their money to buy more things, they always encourage me to keep doing what I'm doing. They tell me, 'Don't compare yourself to us ... what you're doing is different and special. You need to take your time.'"

DEGREE KEY

How many degrees of separation the profiled subjects' current gigs are from their chosen area of study on a scale of 1 to 6, with 6 being the furthest away from their original aims.

Mayor Daley recently rode the Shanghai Transrapid magnetic-levitation train in China, which takes passengers from the Pudong airport to the outskirts of central Shanghai in seven minutes. Daley favors high-speed rail service between Chicago and O'Hare. BLOOMBERG NEWS FILE

Would high-speed rail fly here?

Chicago Tribune

In his role as Chicago's first tourist, Mayor Daley has brought home interesting trinkets, including San Francisco-style trolleys and a Paris-inspired bike-sharing experiment that started this summer downtown.

And now, after recently riding a super-fast train in China, the mayor shared his vision for a similar system that would operate between downtown Chicago and O'Hare.

It's a vision that may be hard for others to picture.

But Daley said investors in China, South Korea, Japan and the Middle East are interested in designing, building and operating such a bullet train for Chicago.

Businesses here haven't exactly been tripping over each other to be first in line to run a proposed "airport express" premium train service that would operate at least partially on CTA Blue Line tracks between O'Hare and the now-mothballed Block 37 "super station" downtown.

"You have to have a high-speed train from the international airport downtown," Daley told reporters last week. "What that would do is that would rebuild our commercial market and our hospitality industry."

It took only seven minutes to make a lasting impression on Daley. That's the travel time on the Shanghai Transrapid train that connects Shanghai Pudong International Airport to the outskirts of central Shanghai.

The Shanghai Transrapid line is a magnetic levitation (maglev) train, floating about a half-inch above a guideway track at speeds reaching 268 mph.

"We have to make tough choices in this region," said MarySue Barrett, president of the Metropolitan Planning Council. "China stands out because there is such clarity of focus and they don't have to worry about public opinion being mobilized to support their decisions. We do have to worry about that."

CTA President Rich Rodriguez said he has studied magnetic levitation technology, and "I'm not proposing to replace our existing rail system with maglev," he said.

But Rodriguez said the CTA will explore other technologies beyond the heavy rail system that the authority has operated since its inception. One idea that interests him is a high-tech crosstown rail line running north-to-south across the entire city, perhaps on Cicero or Western avenues, above the traffic.

"Why not look at a monorail or some other system that would basically avoid the congestion on the streets?" Rodriguez said. "That is one of the things I would like to pursue to get north to south connected."

Fisherman rescued

A fisherman was pushed into DuSable Harbor on Sunday afternoon and was rescued by a friend and Chicago police. The 58-year-old fisherman and the friend who came to his aid refused medical treatment on the scene, police said.

Emanuel launches website

Rahm Emanuel on Saturday made his first public statement directly addressing the mayoral race—in a video on an official website he launched: chicagoforrahm.com.

New Catholic TV show

The American Catholic Church on Sunday premiered a national broadcast on WGN America hosted by a prominent Chicago-area priest. The Rev. Robert Barron, a theologian at St. Mary of the Lake Seminary in Mundelein, will anchor "Word on Fire."

6 wounded in shootings

A 23-year-old man shot early Sunday morning in Rogers Park was among at least six people wounded in separate shootings overnight across the city, according to Chicago police.

CTA rails under repair this week

Rail service along the CTA's Blue, Brown and Red lines will be affected into the week as crews perform repair and maintenance work on the tracks, according to the Chicago Transit Authority. More info at transitchicago.com.

Car clips train on Brown Line

A car clipped the back of a CTA Brown Line train Sunday afternoon after reportedly going around a grade-crossing gate outside the Rockwell Street station on the North Side, according to police and CTA officials. TRIBUNE

Commonwealth Games start amid controversy

4 NEW DELHI, India After harsh criticism and controversy, the 2010 Commonwealth Games began Sunday in New Delhi with a lavish opening ceremony.

Jawaharlal Nehru Stadium gleamed with multi-colored lights as representatives from Commonwealth countries walked the length of the field by turns, waving their flags and wearing traditional native costumes.

It's the first time India has hosted the international sporting event between countries of the former British Empire. The games, held every four years, include many Olympic events as well as other sports played traditionally in those countries.

Britain's Prince Charles and Indian President Pratibha Devisingh Patil officially declared the games open. Prince Charles was representing his mother, Queen Elizabeth.

As the spotlight shines on the country, a team official of the nation's bowling team was suspected of having dengue fever, a mosquito-borne viral disease.

Despite the setback, the event began as planned. Excitement filled the air in New Delhi after days of fears that India simply would not be ready in time. Athletes had expressed alarm over the poor condition of their village. Others charged shoddy construction and slammed the government for corruption.

GETTY IMAGES

BEHIND THE SCENES

The games have been a tough act for a nation that has never hosted such a large international event. Parliament, for instance, has been forced to deal with accusations of corruption in the planning of the games.

Two weeks ago, gunmen fired on a tourist bus in New Delhi and injured two Taiwanese tourists. A car blaze turned out to be a crudely manufactured bomb. And a militant group warned that it planned to target the games.

The games give India an opportunity to promote a shiny image as an emerging power. The government spent billions on a new international airport, additional metro lines and fresh landscaping along dingy Delhi roads.

Still, India remains a country with millions of poor people, who feel brushed aside as the new India tried to put its best face forward.

Travel alert for Americans

5 The U.S. issued a general travel alert for Americans in Europe on Sunday amid concerns that al-Qaida or related groups plan attacks similar to the 2008 massacre in Mumbai, India.

Rutgers holds vigil for student

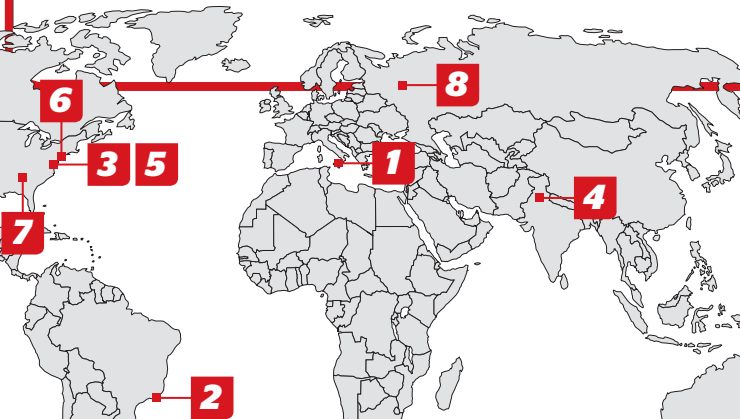

6 Rutgers University held a vigil Sunday as the campus grapples with the suicide of a student whose sexual encounter with another man was broadcast online. The body of Tyler Clementi, 18, was recovered from the Hudson River on Thursday.

'Rick's List' anchor fired

7 CNN fired "Rick's List" host Rick Sanchez on Friday, a day after he called "The Daily Show's" Jon Stewart a "bigot" and suggested Jews run CNN and "all the other" networks.

Plane makes abrupt landing

8 A passenger jet flying from Moscow to Grozny, Chechnya, made an unexpected landing Sunday more than halfway through the trip after an anonymous call warned that an explosive device was on board, a transportation official told state-run media.

That's how long the Comic-Con convention will continue to be held in San Diego, CNN reports. The comic and movie event has committed to remaining in the city until at least 2015.

New York delivers big hits, knocks out two Bears quarterbacks

RedEye

There are big games, big plays, big players and big-game players. The Bears have used a little bit of everything to surprise the NFL with their 3-0 start this season. To continue their hot streak, the Bears needed to come up big in New York. The Giants entered the game fighting for their lives and needed their own big plays to avoid being in an early hole. So which team pulled it off? We rank the big plays to figure it out.

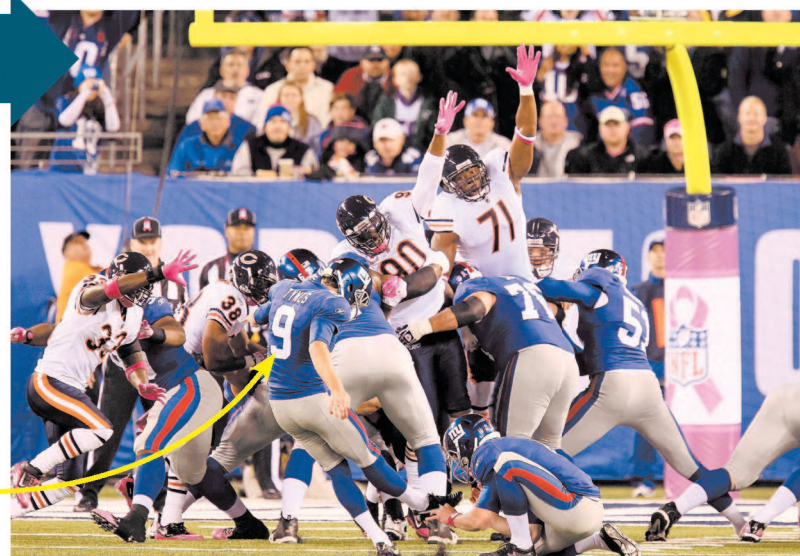

NFC NORTH	W	L	PCT
BEARS	3	1	.750
Green Bay	3	1	.750
Minnesota	1	2	.333
Detroit	0	4	.000

1ST QUARTER

BIG PLAY: Giants stopped on third-and-10 from the 12-yard line, forcing them to kick a field goal. Bears have proved they can come back in games, but it was a psychological victory. For us, at least.

BIGGER PLAY: Giants intercept Jay Cutler in Bears territory. That gives NBC the chance to use its graphic detailing how many picks Cutler has.

BIGGEST PLAY: Lawrence Tynes misses a 38-yard field goal after the Giants intercepted Cutler.

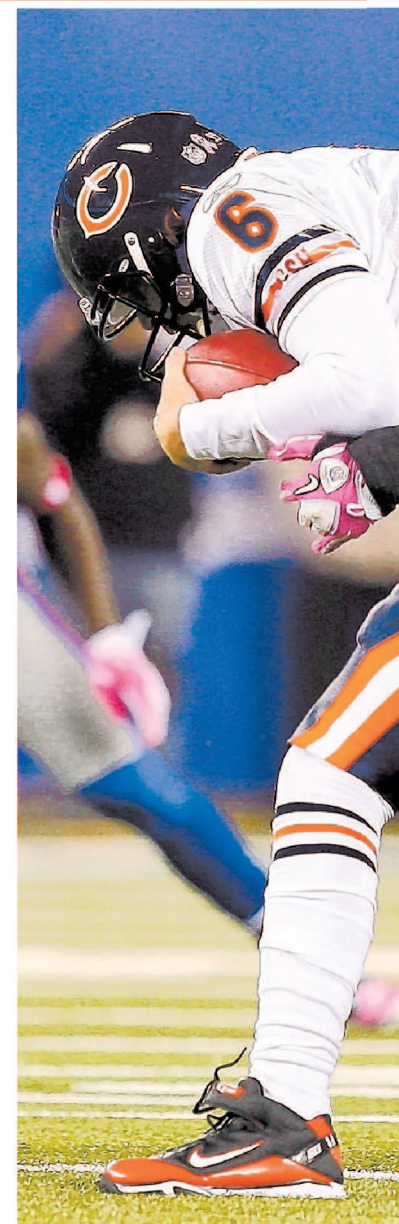

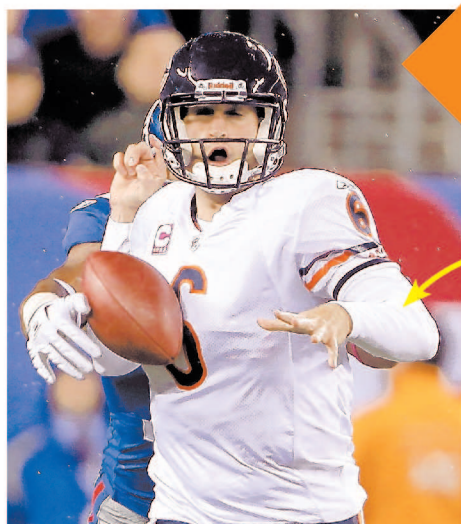

2ND QUARTER

BIG PLAY: Bears running back Matt Forte recovers Cutler's fumble on the team's 28-yard line. Giving the Giants that kind of field position would have been asking for trouble.

BIGGER PLAY: Cutler fumbles again—moments later—and the Giants pounce on it at the Bears' 23-yard line. At this point, Cutler's been sacked five times.

BIGGEST PLAY: The end of the first half. In an ugly 30 minutes of football, Cutler is sacked nine times and the Bears have 22 yards of offense. Punter Brad Maynard might be the MVP. Still, it's only a 3-0 Giants lead.

The Giants' Chris Canty (center) sacks Bears quarterback Jay Cutler during the first half Sunday.

US PRESSWIRE

bear hunting

Good Bears, bad Bears and Bears who went down this week.

YUMMI BEAR Julius Peppers

He was all over the place, making big plays and helping keep the Bears in the game by keeping the Giants from establishing the run. He earned his paycheck. Not all $91.5 million of it, but you get the point.

POO BEAR Todd Collins

As bad as Jay Cutler was—and a lot of that was not his fault—Collins was worse. He was 4-for-11 for 36 yards before being knocked out of the game.

GRISLY BEAR Jay Cutler

While being thrown down during the last of nine first-half Giants sacks, Cutler's helmet smacked the turf, and he didn't return for the second half. REDEYE

McNabb shown Philly love

Surprise, surprise. Philadelphia fans showed a bit of class Sunday when longtime Eagles quarterback Donovan McNabb came back to town in a Washington Redskins jersey.

Instead of throwing batteries or snowballs or showering McNabb with boos, the crowd gave him a standing ovation when his name was called during pregame introductions.

Kudos, Philly.

He was booed, of course, when he helped the Redskins take an early lead. Those are the Eagles fans we know and love.

The good, the bad, and the ugly this week in the NFL.

THINK PINK?

New Orleans Saints receiver Lance Moore fumbled a sure touchdown at the goal line Sunday. Don't even try to blame the pink gloves, Lance.

OH YES! Josh Scobee

A kicker, believe it. Scobee knocked off the Indianapolis Colts with a 59-yard field goal as time expired in Jacksonville to give the Jaguars a huge early-season win. Idiot kicker, right Peyton?

OH NO! Charlie Batch

Pittsburgh is undefeated no more, and you can in part blame Batch for that. The lights-out quarterback from the previous three games was absent, replaced by a 12-for-21, 141-yard guy.

UH-OH! Steve Smith

The playmaking Carolina wide receiver was carted off the field with a left ankle injury in the third quarter. On the bright side, he might not be around for the Bears game Sunday.

3RD QUARTER

BIG PLAY: Cutler remains in the locker room after halftime due to a concussion. Backup Todd Collins starts in his place. One way or another, this is a defining moment.

BIGGER PLAY: Collins avoiding a sack—any of them. Maybe he should teach Cutler his moves.

BIGGEST PLAY: Ahmad Bradshaw's 3-yard scoring run with three minutes left in the third quarter puts the Giants up 10-0. At this point, 10 points seems insurmountable. Heck, three points seemed insurmountable.

4TH QUARTER

BIG PLAY: Robbie Gould turns a Brandon Jacobs fumble at the Giants 29 with 12 minutes left into a field goal to finally put the Bears on the board.

BIGGER PLAY: Zack Bowman strips Bradshaw on what would have been a sure touchdown run, giving the Bears a chance to tie the game—if only they can put together a 99-yard drive. Gulp.

BIGGEST PLAY: Jacobs makes up for his earlier fumble by scoring after the Bears couldn't go anywhere after recovering Bradshaw's fumble. Wait, what? At any rate, it's a dagger, putting the Giants up 17-3.

1 Have you said anything about the Bears that you'd like to take back?

They're terrible. They're a black hole of talent. Kristin Cavallari's ugly. Kidding. I never said that, Jay.

Julius Peppers, I'm sorry I called you overpaid. But if you're feeling any guilt, my Pay Pal account is ...

No. Until Lance Briggs returns my signed copy of X-Men No. 1, he is still a big pooppyhead.

"I wish I knew how to quit you." I regret that all the way around.

Yes, please, fellas. Take it back or I'll take a bite out of your, uh, backsides.

2 What did America learn about the Bears during their prime-time game on NBC on Sunday?

They, too, have been waiting all day for Sunday night. Keep the Faith.

That regardless of outcome, they look better in prime time than Jay Leno.

"SNL" isn't the only place where you'll find "Not Ready For Prime Time Players."

Heading for "The Hills" is a good thing.

Devin Hester's not really in hibernation.

3 Life without Brian Campbell is going to be _____ for the Blackhawks.

Not mmm-mmm good.

Hjalmar-licious?

Incorrigible.

No problem. Life without Buff, Burish, Niemi, Ladd, Versteeg, Sopel, Eager and Madden is another story!

Hairy.

4 What can you do now that you couldn't before now that Chicago baseball's over?

Turn on WGN without the risk of spontaneously vomiting.

Finally I can take this bag off my head-- Gah! Sunlight! Tourists! ... Fanny packs!

Find parking in Wrigleyville. Cubby Bear, here I come!

Hey Bluto, it was over several weeks ago. Now bend over as Ricketts raises ticket prices.

Hang out with the rats at Wrigley that Ozzie is always talking about. And by "hang out," I mean "snack on."

5 How important is the Ryder Cup?

Too important to completely ignore, not important enough to have a fantasy league based off it.

It's two sentences in a story about Tiger Woods' return to the top, if it's anything.

It adds a little spice in the bedroom. What? Oh, I thought you said "riding crop."

I tweeted about it at 3 a.m. Sunday. Important? I think it just means I have no life.

So important I decided to use it instead of the woods, if you know what I mean.

BULLS, BLACKHAWKS DOWN

INJURIES TO SIDELINE BOOZER, CAMPBELL FOR SEVERAL WEEKS

The Blackhawks and Bulls haven't even started their regular seasons yet, but they've already suffered significant losses.

BLACKHAWKS 4, ST. LOUIS 3

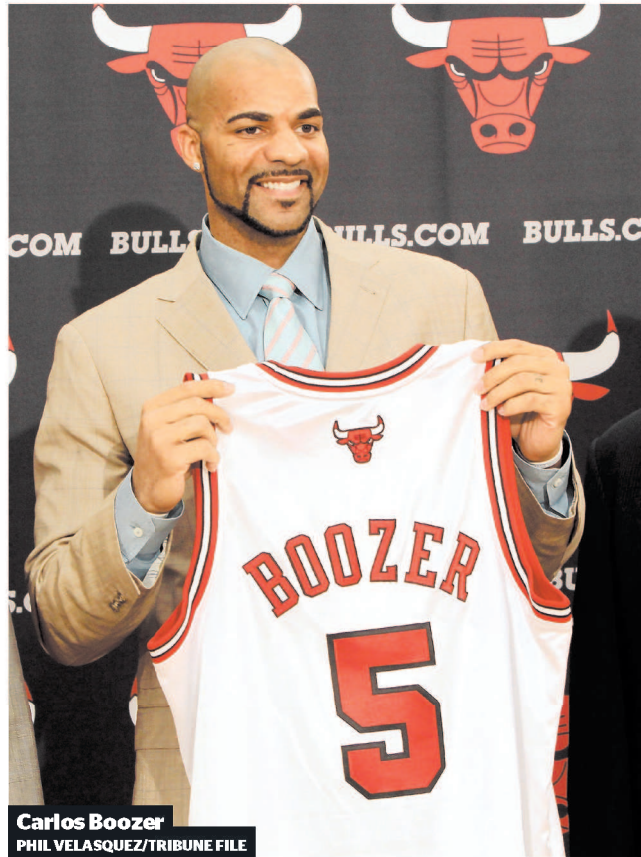

On Friday night, the Hawks lost defenseman Brian Campbell to a sprained right knee. He is expected to be out four to five weeks. That means he would miss about the first month of the regular season, which begins Thursday.

"There's no good timing for injuries," Quenneville said. "Last year we started the year without [Marian] Hossa, [Dave] Bolland was hurt for a while and [Ben] Eager hurt."

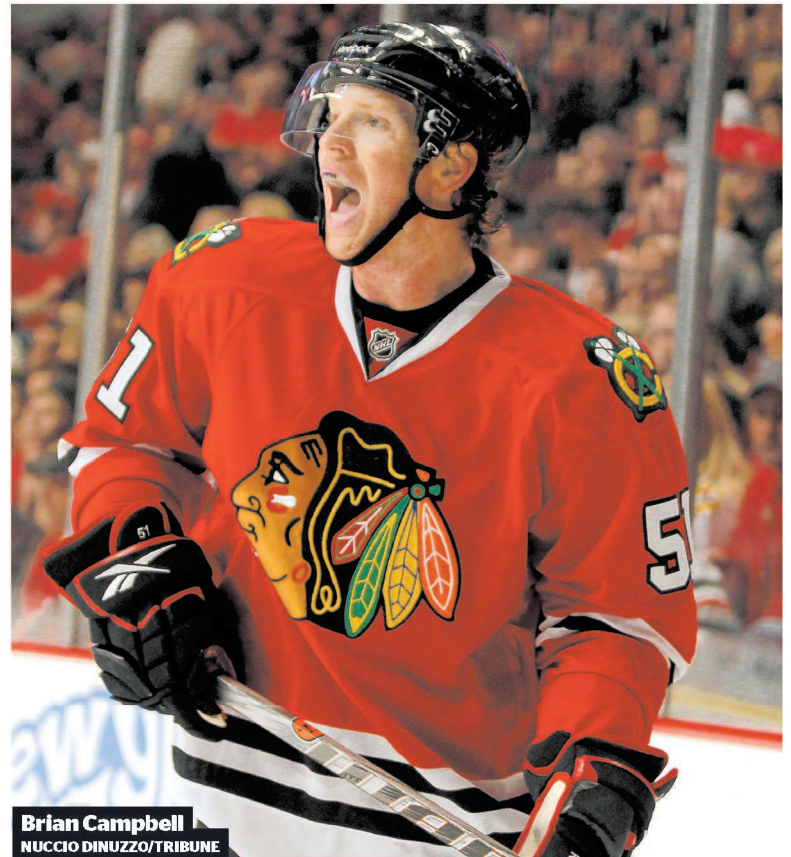

Last season, the Hawks lost Campbell for the last 14 games of the regular season and the first three games of the playoff series against Nashville. They went 9-8 in those games, but against the Predators, the Hawks were down 2-1 and looked very close to a first-round exit. After Campbell's return, the Hawks eliminated the Preds with three straight wins.

The Hawks' loss is nowhere near as severe as the Bulls', however. The Bulls will be without prized free-agent acquisition Carlos Boozer, who broke his right hand Saturday and will require surgery. He'll be gone eight weeks.

If Boozer misses all eight weeks, he will return following the Bulls' annual early-season road trip Nov. 27. That would mean 15 missed games.

Boozer missed 138 of 492 games during six seasons in Utah. Asked during his introductory news conference about his tendency to suffer injuries, Boozer said his injuries have been unrelated, non-chronic and bad luck. Boozer told team officials he tripped and fell at his home.

"I was at my house, came around a corner, fell over a bag, put my arm down to try to brace myself and fractured my fifth metacarpal into three pieces," he said. "If I had landed with an open hand I would've been fine."

» Northwestern, off to a 5-0 start, climbed into the USA Today Coaches' Poll at No. 25. The Wildcats remained perfect after beating Minnesota 29-28 on Saturday on a late field goal by Stefan Demos. Northwestern is ranked for the first time since Dec. 7, 2008, when it landed at No. 20.

» Angel McCoughtry scored 18 points to lead all scorers and guide the U.S. to an 89-69 rout of Czech Republic to win the 2010 FIBA Women's World Championship. Team USA never lost a game in the tournament, winning all 11.

» The Bulls and Joakim Noah have agreed to a five-year contract extension, according to sources familiar with the negotiations. The exact amount of the extension is unknown.

FINAL SCORE

» Houston 4, Cubs 0

» White Sox 6, Cleveland 5

» Dario Franchitti wins IndyCar Series title.

Devil in the details

Don't trick yourself: Halloween is on its way—time to plan

Are your friends hounding you about Halloween party plans and costume details? They should. The big day is less than four weeks away. Don't settle for last-minute bashes and leftover costume supplies. Follow these steps and get your spook started now.

A. FIND A PARTY

A sweet costume is only as good as the party it goes to. Here are three early warnings.

The Greatest Show on Earth

The Underground,
56 W. Illinois St. 312-644-7600

Four days of circus-centric events yield ringmaster DJs, animal-esque themes, sexy acrobats and killer clowns, all with big-top decor.

When: Oct. 28-31

Halloween at Sidetrack

Sidetrack,
3349 N. Halsted St. 773-477-9189

Scope out the 14th annual North Halsted Street Halloween Parade—involving some of the city's best costumes on display—via jumbo screens and compete in a costume contest.

When: Oct. 31

Uncle Fatty's Halloween weekend

Uncle Fatty's Rum Resort,
2833 N. Sheffield Ave. 773-477-3661

This party bar spent a cool $10,000 on its Terror Island 3-themed decor. On Halloween weekend, participate in the Killer Country Night, a $500 costume contest and Hair Wars, a salon competition of style re-creations from Tim Burton films.

When: Oct. 29-31

B. BRAINSTORM A COSTUME

GO 'JERSEY SHORE'

1. Snooki

Just because she recently declared herself "bump"-free doesn't mean you can't emulate the textbook Snook.

Ingredients:

- » High-teased hair
- » Super-short metallic dress, stiletto pumps
- » Magazine with marriage proposal on cover

2. The Situation

There's no "Dancing With the Stars" mirror ball trophy currently in his future, so set your sights on beachwear and hard, hot abs.

- » Slicked-back hair
- » Beachy board shorts, permanently lifted T-shirt
- » Plastic abs—or the real thing: Flaunt it if you've got it, guys

DO THE GAGA

3. Meat Gaga

Her VMA, um, "dress" sure was unforgettable—and reportedly is being made into jerky, so snap into a Slim Jim for a snacky accessory.

- » Long white wig
- » Chunky, fake-rhinestone collar and bracelet
- » Dress, shoes and hat made of "meat." We suggest going the fake route and re-creating this look with a body suit and painted strips of red-hued fabric.

Lolla Gaga

Among her many costume changes, Lady Gaga sparkled as Lollapalooza's most anticipated headliner in her big-shouldered purple ensemble. P.S. We saw as many guys as gals working their Gaga at Lolla, so consider this unisex.

- » Blonde wig
- » Purple-painted, glittery sunglasses
- » Fishnets, tall black boots and purple-leopard bodysuit
- » Large punky purple jacket. Cinch with a belt and stuff shoulders with blocks of Styrofoam

GET BIEB-IFIED

4. Classic Bieb

Aww, isn't he cute? Surround yourself with Silly Bandz and throngs of swooning ladies to pull off this tween heartthrob.

- » Justin Bieber wig! The hair makes or breaks this costume, so choose wisely and bring along a brush
- » Black letterman jacket a few sizes too large
- » Microphone headset

C. GET IN THE SPIRIT

Why wait till Halloween weekend for scary entertainment?

The Fear

Navy Pier,
600 E. Grand Ave. the.fearhauntedhouse.com

This house of caged zombies, albino clowns and vampires turns off the lights after 6 p.m. and brings out the real monsters for a dose of grown-up horror.

When: Oct. 8-31.
$20-$25

Madam Barker's Halloween Variety Show

DCA Storefront Theater,
66 E. Randolph St. 312-742-8497

The Molly Brennan-led theater spectacle and talk show features special guests such as Rick Bayless and the story of a recently deceased singer (Brennan) who's back from the dead.

Details: 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays (Oct. 13-Nov. 3); $20

Hi, How Are You?

is "one girl's experience serving seafood, soda and her soul in a corporate shrimp shack."

This novel by 20-something server/author Katy Franklin is an "insightful, delectable and, ultimately, humorous foray into the crazy world that is the restaurant industry."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Libra

Sept. 23-Oct. 23

There's a new moon in your sign, which happens just once a year. Positive energies are flowing in. If you want to mend fences with someone, this is the time to do it. A sexy reunion could be in the works if you play your cards right.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You won't allow yourself to stay home alone on a Saturday night. Two planets in your sign are filling you with nervous and lusty energy. You need to get out there and start flirting immediately. Show off that killer wit and that hot body.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You thought you had made a successful catch, but he or she is wriggling off of your fishing line. Maybe he got spooked when you talked about wanting 10 kids. Or perhaps she was uneasy when you told her you're a bigamist. Jupiter is creating melodrama.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You could receive a communication from a former flame. Mercury is stirring up romantic energy from your past. You could have a flashback about how great things were with your college girlfriend or boyfriend as you chat on the phone.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Mercury is giving you a flirty, bouncy feeling. You'll spread sunshine as you travel from place to place. Along the way, you might meet someone who is taken by your charms. Make sure you collect his or her contact information.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Sometimes you have trust issues. A moon opposition is heightening fears that your girlfriend is sleeping with the football team or your guy still is hooking up with his ex. The good news is that there probably is nothing to worry about. Notice I said "probably."

Aries March 21-April 19

You're wondering if you've developed severe body odor or a major personality disorder. Why is everybody ignoring you? Blame Mercury for your social isolation. A "Sex and the City" marathon might make you feel better.

Taurus April 20-May 20

You won't take no for an answer. You want someone, and you want him or her badly. It doesn't matter if the guy is married or the woman is a nun. Mars has you pushing your way into that person's life. It will either work or it will blow up in your face.

Gemini May 21-June 21

You need to change the way you're approaching romance. You don't need to find a perfect relationship immediately. It's OK to give things time to evolve and grow. The moon is reminding you that good things come to those who wait.

Cancer June 22-July 22

You could discover that you share a weirdly powerful connection with someone. Until now, you never thought about him or her as a romantic prospect. The moon has you discovering that he loves broccoli rabe too. Or she adores ferrets as much as you do.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Your lover might turn out to be as crazy as a loon. Neptune is showing you that he's a secret squirrel collector or she's nursing a lifelong fascination with earmuffs. You want to believe that it's just a harmless hobby—but is it really?

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Suggest something raunchy and wild to your significant other. The moon is stirring up your playful side. Earth signs can be straight-laced in the bedroom, but once in a while, you like to shock your partner with your sensual innovation.

Edward Burns filmed scenes for his upcoming low-budget indie flick "Nice Guy Johnny" at his parents' and sister's houses and borrowed the cars in the film from friends and family—except for an old convertible. That's his. Cast members—including Matt Bush (Johnny), known more for his role in the AT&T rollover minutes commercials than his film work—applied their own makeup.

Why all the corner-cutting?

"The minute someone writes you a check, there's artistic compromise," said Burns, the film's writer and director, ironically sitting in his oversized Chicago hotel suite last month. "You're not able to cast the people you want to cast. They're offering and sometimes making changes they feel the film needs. That's frustrating.

"On a low-budget film, there are also compromises. You need to find free locations to film. There are no special effects. Nobody is going to look at your film and say, 'Wow, that's a cool shot.' You have to be OK with telling smaller character stories. But that's all I've wanted to do anyhow."

Burns, a steak-loving guy's guy who introduced himself as "Eddie," said the film had a three-man crew and was shot in 10 days on a $25,000 budget. That's also how much he said 1995's "The Brothers McMullen" cost. The difference is that he was a production assistant earning $18,000 a year when he made "Brothers."

"My mom told me to get a suit and get a job at the bank," Burns said about his aspiring filmmaker days.

"Brothers" went on to earn more than $10 million at the domestic box office and launched a career that includes writing, directing and starring in 1996's "She's The One" and roles in 1998's "Saving Private Ryan," NBC's "Will & Grace" and HBO's "Entourage."

Burns will attend the screening of "Nice Guy Johnny"—about a sports radio host debating whether to stick with the job he loves or pursue a corporate job to please his fiancée—Oct. 15 at the Chicago International Film Festival. It'll be one of the few opportunities moviegoers have to see the romantic comedy in theaters.

Rather than the typical theater-first route, Burns is taking an unconventional approach and releasing the film Oct. 26 on Netflix, iTunes, PlayStation 3, On Demand and amazon.com.

"When people hear about the film, we want them to grab their remotes and say, 'OK, got it.' It's going to work. It's going to make a decent chunk of money that'll enable us to fund another movie and we'll be here next year talking to you again about it."

The minute someone writes you a check, there's artistic compromise."

—Edward Burns

SIGHTINGS

Blues show. Fellow pop star Jason Derulo, who recently turned 21, hung out at Enclave that night.

» The White Sox's Gordon Beckham and the Blackhawks' Duncan Keith sat at nearby tables Saturday at Sunda.

« Vince Vaughn (left) was sporting sneakers and sweat-pants when he had dinner Thursday with two buddies at the trendy SushiSamba Rio. The Boston Red Sox's David Ortiz was spotted at Sushi Samba Rio and at Hub 51 on Sept. 27.

» The White Sox's Manny Ramirez and Andrew Jones hung out at Cuvee on Wednesday and Hub 51's downstairs club, Sub 51, on Thursday. Ramirez was back at Cuvee on Friday (the Bulls' Joakim Noah also was there that night) and partied at The Underground on Saturday.

» The Red Sox's Josh Beckett and John Lackey stopped by River Shannon on Wednesday following their loss to the White Sox.

hit Stay lounge later that night, as did several of Cutler's teammates, including Olsen.

» Former NBA All-Stars Michael Finley and Antoine Walker watched the Bears-Packers game separately at District on Sept. 27. Walker sprayed a bottle of Moët Rose when the Bears won.

GRADE-A MARY JANE

There's a new Peter Parker in Hollywood, and Sony believes it has found his new Mary Jane. "Easy A" and "Superbad" star Emma Stone has been offered the role of Mary Jane Watson in the 3-D Spider-Man movie reboot, dead line.com reports. She joins Andrew Garfield ("The Social Network") as Peter Parker in the reimagining of the series.

Wentz

Cure for a dirty mouth

Pete Wentz swearing? Not these days—at least not when he's around his 2-year-old son, Bronx. "As a parent, I'm finally being able to get my mouth to behave itself as far as saying naughty words," the Fall Out Boy bassist tells usmagazine.com "He says everything!"

Small-screen wonder

She's been trying to make her way to the big screen for years, but Wonder Woman may be returning to her TV roots. Warner Bros. Television is developing a small-screen "Wonder Woman" reboot on the heels of the '70s TV series, thr.com reports. "Boston Legal" and "Ally McBeal" creator David E. Kelley is writing and producing the potential series, according to the site.

Whoa, mama

In what appears to be a miracle of modern medicine, 26-year-old Olivia Wilde will star as 29-year-old Justin Timberlake's mother in an upcoming thriller, online.com reports. The pair will be joined by Vincent Kartheiser, 31, as the father of Amanda Seyfried, 24. This movie must be set pretty far in the future.

New show, new focus

Ever wonder what happened to Lauren Conrad of "The Hills" after she left the show? She is set to star in a new reality TV show for MTV, but she tells Tribune Newspapers she's conscious of her personal life overshadowing her fashion designs, the focus of the new show. "My career has always served as a backdrop to talk about boyfriends and fights. This is an opportunity to show the things that I love to do," she said.

THE DIGIT $23 million

The amount that landed "The Social Network" at No. 1 at the box office in its debut weekend in theaters.

"Waka. Flacka. Flamed. Out."

Tweet posted by Stephen Hill, BET's executive vice president of entertainment and music programming, about Waka Flocka Flame's performance Saturday at the BET Hip-Hop Awards, according to mtv.com. The awards are scheduled to be broadcast at 7 p.m. Oct. 12.
